R Shaw Among the happinesses revealed to Tytyl in the Blue Bird, is the Happine-B of Seeing the Stars Rise. This is compared to a god of gold. Following the happinesses came a train of great joys. Chief among these was the Joy of Seeing what is beautiful. Thus in graceful symbol Maeterlinck teaches the secret of pleasure in every-day life the secret of seeing thing. Since the morning stars sang over the wonders of creation, night has blasoned the glory of God and shown forth knowledge. Owing to their mystery, their beauty, their stedfastness, it was especially fitting and typical that a star should have heralded the birth of our Saviour and that He, on Patmos, should have railed...
